

The Flyer

By Stuart Harrison

Stuart Harrison. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 454 pages. Dimensions: 8.0in. x 5.2in. x 1.3in. Set against the background of an English country house, and the skies above France during the First World War, The Flyer is a story of love and loyalty. When a young aviator crashes in a Northamptonshire field and is pulled from the wreckage by William Reynolds, it is the beginning of a close friendship. Christopher is the son of the Earl of Pitsford, whereas William runs a small garage and though clearly well-educated, his background remains a mystery. After William agrees to help Christopher build a new plane to compete in an air-trial, he is introduced to Elizabeth, and a complex relationship develops between the three young people. As William falls in love, he is plagued by the suspicion that Elizabeth is really in love with Christopher. Since the mystery surrounding William masks a deep seated loneliness and insecurity, it will only take one shattering event to expose the undercurrents of tension and destroy everything that William has tried to believe in. The second half of the story takes place several years later, during the First World War. William is a pilot in France, but his...
